Australiam Muslim Voices.

Australian Muslim Voices resulted from three months' work to source a group of Australian Muslims willing to speak freely about their faith. The nine people who agreed to take part were of varying ages, a mix of ethnic backgrounds and had had lived in Australia for different lengths of time.

A selection of stories from the 6000 word project was published off the front page of The Age which, on the same day, published an editorial calling for tolerance and respect and asked Muslim readers to fill out an online survey about their experiences living in Australia.
