Australia's Third World Indigenous Housing Shame

Jane Bardon researched, filmed, wrote and produced this series of reports which put pressure on the Federal and Northern Territory governments to improve living conditions in Northern Territory indigenous communities. The Federal Government responded to the series of stories by committing to a new indigenous housing national partnership agreement, while the then NT Chief Minister responded by travelling to the remote Katherine community of Binjari with Bardon to announce that he was doubling the Government's commitment to indigenous housing.
